Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

Under current law, a county board may engage in zoning and land use planning by creating a county planning agency or by designating a previously constituted county committee or commission as the county planning agency. Also under current law, a city or village, or certain towns that exercise village powers, may create a city, village, or town plan commission to engage in zoning and land use planning. If a town that is not authorized to exercise village powers chooses to exercise zoning authority, the town board must appoint a town zoning committee.

Under this bill, the planning agency, plan commission, or zoning committee of a political subdivision (any city, village, town, or county) must also include, as a nonvoting member, a representative from a military base or installation, with at least 200 assigned military personnel or that contains at least 2,000 acres, that is located in the political subdivision, if the base's or installation's commanding officer appoints such a representative.

Generally, under current law, if a political subdivision or a subunit of a political subdivision wants to propose a new zoning ordinance, development plan, or master plan, or if a political subdivision or a subunit of a political subdivision wants to amend an existing ordinance or plan, the political subdivision or the subunit must first hold a public hearing on the proposed ordinance or amendment and provide notice that the hearing will be held.

Under this bill, with regard to a proposed zoning ordinance or development or master plan change, the entity holding the public hearing must consider any comments made or submitted by the commanding officer, or his or her designee, of a military base or installation, with at least 200 assigned military personnel or that contains at least 2,000 acres, that is located in or near the political subdivision. If a political subdivision enacts such zoning or land use ordinances or plans, a copy of the enactment must be sent to the commanding officer or designee.

Under the current law commonly known as the "Smart Growth" statute, if a political subdivision or regional planning commission creates a comprehensive plan (a development plan or a master plan) or amends an existing comprehensive plan, the plan must contain certain planning elements. The required planning elements include the following: intergovernmental cooperation; housing; transportation; utilities and community facilities; agricultural, natural, and cultural resources; economic development; and land use.

Under this bill, the intergovernmental cooperation element must consider, to the greatest extent possible, the maps and plans of any military base or installation, with at least 200 assigned military personnel or that contains at least 2,000 acres, with which the political subdivision or regional planning commission shares common territory.

This bill also creates a council on military and state relations in the office of the governor. The council is to work with the state's military installations and communities, state agencies, and economic development professionals to enhance those military installations and determine how state agencies can better serve military communities and military families. The council must also advise and assist the governor on issues related to the location of military installations in the state. The council consists of representatives from the Department of Military Affairs, Fort McCoy, and the governor's office, and two members of each house of the legislature.

Current law generally requires a person who wishes to sell real property to provide within ten days after acceptance of an offer to purchase the property a real estate disclosure report to the buyer of the property. The report must list any condition (defect) that would have a significantly adverse effect on the value of the property, that would significantly impair the health or safety of future occupants of the property, or that if not repaired or replaced, would significantly shorten or adversely affect the normal life of the property. After receiving the report, the buyer, before the applicable deadline, may rescind the contract of sale if the report discloses a defect.

ASSEMBLY BILL 399

This bill requires a seller of real estate that lies within a two-mile radius of a military installation to include this fact as a defect in the real estate disclosure report.

For further information see the state and local fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
